SCRUB-A-DUB-DUB

Did you enjoy playing at cleaner tables before we all began sheltering in place? If so, you have Mary Platter-Rieger, Sarah Hans, Candy Gawler, Rick Jackson, and BK Swenson to thank.

They spent a couple hours on Saturday morning, February 1st washing card tables, side tables, bid boxes, and, even the table markers in the main game room and the classroom.

If you caught a whiff of PineSol in early February, now you know why. How about this: two hours scrubbing add more than 3000 steps to your fitness counter. Sweet!

GARDEN ADDITIONS

While the rest of us have been staying away from the club building as mandated, our club gardener, Virginia Wofford has been using her permitted outdoor exercise time to tend and expand the garden surrounding the building.

> The City planted a jacaranda in the triangle of earth just outside the south entrance to the building. In addition to committing to watering the tree (since the City did not install irrigation there), Virginia added a bunch of other plants.

> Redwood member, Carolyn Berger, offered up a bonanza of root-bound potted succulents. Virginia freed them all and gave each one plenty of room to grow around the jacaranda. Virginia then surrounded the entire triangle with ground cover. From a bare patch of ground, Virginia developed an incredible garden.

> For someone with as brown a thumb as mine, the transformation is nothing short of miraculous. Good on you, Virginia!

BROKEN LINKS

Our website is undergoing some maintenance while we are all on hiatus. If you have bookmarked links in the past, those links may no longer get you where you want to go.

For now, the best link to use is this:

Thank you, Joy Brown and David Walters, for your expertise in updating the website.

REFINISHING TABLES

Guess which talented woodworker is refinishing tables in the main game room? Yup, John Rieger is using his incredible talents to spruce up the game room tables. They'll be looking spiffy when we all get back.
